THE JOHN ADAMS ARRIVED.

THIS Vessel has at last arrived from France, and the despatches by her have been published. They will arrest and enchain attention.—They will convince, beyond relapse, the American people, who the men have been who have justly and impartially delineated the views and conduct of the Tyrant of France towards the United States; and who they have been, who have traiterously apologized for his conduct, or attempted to gloss it over with deception and lies.

Despatches by the John Adams.

THE National Intelligencer of the 15th inst. contains Twenty Official Despatches from our Ministers in France and England, received by the John Adams.—Those from Mr. Pinkney are of various dates, from the 19th February to the 2d April, 1810.—They relate principally to explanations with the British Minister respecting the blockade of the ports from the Elbe to Brest. On this subject, the Marquis Wellesley, under date of the 26th March, says, "The blockades notified by Great-Britain, in May 1806 [from the Elbe to Brest] has never been formally withdrawn;" but "are comprehended under the more extensive restriction of the Orders of Council of 7th January, 1807." "No other blockade of the ports of France was instituted by Great Britain between the 16th of May, 1806, and the 7th of January, 1807, excepting the blockade of Venice instituted July 27, 1806, which is still in force."

The letters from Mr. Armstrong are of dates from the 25th January to the 16th April, 1810.

The 1st containing a proposition respecting the reciprocal revocation of the Blockading Order, and the Berlin decree, by England and France, has before been published.

The 2d. complains to the Duke of Cadore [Champagny] of an Imperial Order directing the proceeds of American property sequestered in Spain, to be placed in the Custom-House at Bayonne, which properly included "the produce of the soil of the United States."

The 3d. relates to an abortive project, for renewing the Convention of 1800.

The 4th announces the receipt of a note from the Duke, dated 21st Feb. stating that "His Majesty [Napoleon] had decided not to sell the American property seized in the ports of Spain, but that the money arising therefrom should remain in depot!"

The 5th, dated 10th March, is a long and spirited answer of Gen. Armstrong to the last and other notes of Champagny.—This answer we give entire, as follows:—

Gen. Armstrong to the Duke de Cadore.
Paris 10th March, 1810.

SIR,

I HAD yesterday the honor of receiving a verbal message from your excellency, stating, that "his majesty had decided, that the American property seized in the ports of Spain should be sold, but that the money arising therefrom should remain in depot."

On receiving this information, two questions suggested themselves—

1st. Whether this decision was, or was not, extended to ships, as well as to cargoes? and 2d. Whether the money arising from the sales which might be made under it, would, or would not, be subject to the issue of the pending negociation?

The gentleman charged with the delivery of your message not having been instructed to answer these questions, it becomes my duty to present them to your excellency, and to request a solution of them. Nor is it less a duty, on my part, to examine the ground on which his majesty has been pleased to take this decision, which I understand to be that of reprisals suggested for the first time in the note you did me the honor to write to me on the 14th ultimo. In the 4th paragraph of this note, it is said, that "His majesty could not have calculated on the measures taken by the United States, who, having no grounds of complaint against France, have imprisoned her in their acts of exclusion, and since the month of May last have prohibited the entry into their ports of French vessels, by subjecting them to confiscation."

It is true that the United States have since the 20th of May last forbidden the entry of French vessels into their harbours—and it is also true that the penalty of confiscation attaches to the violation of this law. But in what respect does this offend France? Will she refuse to us the right of regulating commerce within our own ports? Or will she deny that the law in question is a regulation merely municipal? Examine it both as to object and means—what does it more than forbid American ships from going into the ports of France, and French ships from coming into those of the United States? And why this prohibition? To avoid injury and insult; to escape that lawless state, which is declared to be "a forced consequence of the decrees of the British Council." If then its object be purely defensive, what are its means? Simply a law, previously and generally promulgated, operating solely within the territory of the United States, and punishing alike the infractors of it, whether citizens of the said States, or others. And what is this but the exercise of a right, common to all nations, of excluding at their will foreign commerce, and of enforcing that exclusion? Can this be deemed a wrong to France? Can this be regarded as a legitimate cause of reprisal on the part of a power, who makes it the first duty of nations to defend their sovereignty, and who even denationalizes the ships of those who will not subscribe to the opinion.

But it has been said that the "United States had nothing to complain of against France."

Was the capture and condemnation of a ship, driven on the shores of France by stress of weather and the perils of the sea—nothing? Was the seizure and sequestration of many cargoes brought to France in ships violating no law and admitted to regular entry at the imperial custom houses—nothing? Was the violation of our maritime rights, consecrated as they have been by the solemn forms of a public treaty—nothing? In a word, was it nothing that our ships were burnt on the high seas, without other offence than that of belonging to the United States; or other apology, than was to be found in the enhanced safety of the perpetrator? Surely if it be the duty of the United States to resent the theoretical usurpations of the British Orders of Nov. 1807, it cannot be less their duty to complain of the daily and practical outrages on the part of France! It is indeed true that were the people of the United States destitute of policy, of honor, and of energy, (as has been insinuated) they might have adopted a system of discrimination between the two great belligerents; they might have drawn imaginary lines between the first and second aggressor; they might have resented in the one a conduct to which they tamely submitted in the other, and in this way have patched up a compromise between honor and interest, equally weak and disgraceful. But such was not the course they pursued, and it is perhaps a necessary consequence of the justice of their measures, that they are at this day an independent nation. But I will not press this part of my subject; it would be affrontful to your excellency (knowing as you do, that there are not less than one hundred American ships within his majesty's possession, or that of his allies) to multiply proofs, that the U. States have grounds of complaint against France.

My attention is necessarily called to another part of the same paragraph, which immediately follows the quotation already made.—"As soon," says your excellency, "as his majesty was informed of this measure, (the non-intercourse law) it became his duty to retaliate upon the American vessels, not only within his own territories, but also within the countries under his influence. In the ports of Holland, Spain, Italy and Naples, the American vessels have been seized, because the Americans had seized French vessels."

Those remarks divide themselves into the following heads:

1st. The right of His Majesty to seize and confiscate American vessels, within his own territories.

2d. The right to do so within the territories of his allies; and

3d. The reason of that right, viz. "because Americans had seized French vessels."

The first of these subjects has been already examined; and the second must be decided like the first, since his majesty's rights, within the limits of his ally, cannot be greater than within his own.—If then it has been shewn, that the non-intercourse law was merely defensive in its object; that it was not intended to guard against that state of violence which unhappily prevailed; that it was restricted in its operation to the territory of the United States, and that it was duly promulgated there and in Europe before execution. It will be almost unnecessary to repeat, that a law of such description cannot authorise a measure of reprisal, equally sudden and silent in its enactment and application, founded on no previous wrong, productive of no previous complaint, and operating beyond the limits of His Majesty's territories and within those of sovereigns, who had even invited the commerce of the United States to their ports.

It is therefore the third subject only, the reason of the right, which remains to be examined; and with regard to it I may observe, that if the alledged fact which forms this reason be unfounded, the reason itself fails and the right with it. In this view of the business I may be permitted to enquire, when and where any seizure of a French vessel has taken place under the non-intercourse law? and at the same time to express my firm persuasion, that no such seizure has been made: a persuasion founded alike on the silence of the government and of the journals of the country, and still more on the positive declaration of several well informed and respectable persons who have left America as late as the 26th of December last. My conclusion therefore is—that no French vessel having violated the law, no seizure of such vessel has occurred, and that the report which has reached Paris is probably founded on a circumstance altogether unconnected with the non-intercourse law or its operation.

Though far from wishing to prolong this letter, I cannot close it without remarking the great and sudden change wrought in His Majesty's sentiments with regard to the defensive system adopted by the United States. The law, which is now believed to furnish ground for reprisal, was first communicated to His Majesty in June or July last, and certainly did not then excite any suspicion or feeling unfriendly to the American government. Far from this, its communication was immediately followed by overtures of accomodation, which, though productive of no positive arrangements, did not make matters worse than they found them.

On the 22d of August last I was honored with a full exposition of the views and principles which had governed, and which should continue to govern His Majesty's policy in relation to the United States, and in this we do not find the slightest trace of complaint against the provisions of the law in question.

At a period later than the 22d of August, an American ship, destined to a port of Spain, was captured by a French privateer. An appeal was made to His Majesty's minister of war, who, having submitted the case, received orders to liberate all American vessels destined to Spanish ports, which had not violated the Imperial decrees.

Another American ship, at a point of time still later than the capture of the preceding, was brought into the port of Bayonne, but having violated no law of His Majesty, was acquitted by his council of prizes; and lastly,

In the long conversation I had the honor of holding with your Excellency on the 25th of January, no idea of reprisal was maintained by you nor suspected by me; but on the contrary, in speaking of the seizure of American property in Spain, you expresly declared, that it was not a confiscation.

Can proofs more conclusive, that from the first promulgation of the law down to the 25th of January last, nothing in the nature of reprisal was contemplated by His Majesty?

What circumstance may have since occurred to produce a change in his opinion, I know not; but the confidence I feel in the open and loyal policy of His Majesty, altogether excludes the idea, that the rule was merely found for the occasion, and made to justify seizures, not otherwise justifiable.

I pray your Excellency to accept,

&c. &c.

(Signed) JOHN ARMSTRONG.

His Excellency the Duke of Cadore, minister of Exterior Relations.

[The remainder of the Documents being highly important, we give them entire.]

Extract of a letter from General Armstrong to Mr. Smith, dated Paris, the 4th April, 1810.

After seven weeks detention in England, the John Adams has at length got back to France. She arrived in the roads of Havre on the 28th ultimo.

I informed Mr. Champagny, 1st. that Mr. Pinkney had not been able to send by this conveyance the result of his application to the British government concerning the blockades of France prior to the Berlin decree; but that he hoped to be able to send it in a few days by another conveyance; and 2d. that if he (Mr. Champagny) had any thing to communicate which would have the effect of changing the present relations of the two countries, and which he wished to be early known to the government of the United States, he would do well to let me know it within 24 hours, as the messenger would leave Paris within that time. To this message I received from him the following answer: That "for some days past nothing in the nature of business and unconnected with the marriage of the Emperor could be transacted; and that for some days to come the same cause of delay would continue to operate; that my letters were still before the Emperor, and that he would seize the first moment to get some decision in relation to them." Thus you see every thing is yet in air.

Copy of a letter from Mr. Pinkney to General Armstrong, dated London, 23d March, 1810.

DEAR SIR,

Although I have detained the corvette much longer than I wished I am not yet able to send you the result of my application to this government concerning the British blockades of France prior to the Berlin decree. I expect to receive it in a very few days, and will immediately forward it to you by Mr. Lee, by the way of Morlaix, for it seems that the French government will not permit a messenger to land at any other port.

I have the honor to be, &c. &c.

(Signed) W. PINKNEY.

His Excellency Gen. Armstrong.

Extract of a letter from General Armstrong to Mr. Smith, dated Paris, 7th April, 1810.

"The Emperor left Paris two days ago for St. Cloud, whence he goes to Compeigne, where he will remain till Easter. It is not probable that I shall have an answer to my propositions till he returns to Paris. The day before he set out he gave me a ship to carry myself and family to the United States. The minister recommended that I should not pin myself down to any day as to departure, as circumstances might make it proper for me to stay somewhat longer than I now intended. The treaty between France and Holland was ratified the 30th March, and will be published this day in Holland. I am assured that it contains the following article:

"Toutes les marchandises venues sur les batimens Americains entres dans les ports de la Hollande depuis le 1er Janvier, 1809, seront mis sous le sequestre et appartiendront a la France pour en disposer selon les circonstances et les relations politiques avec les Etats Unis." * You will see by the copy enclosed of a decree of the king of Naples, that he has put his gains beyond the reach of negociation. The ports of Prussia are opened to our commerce. Avoid both Prussia and Denmark till you have other assurances."

Naples, 12 March, 1810.

Joachim Napoleon, King of the Two Sicilies,

* "All the merchandise conveyed into the ports of Holland on board American vessels, since the first day of January, 1809, shall be put under sequestration, subject to the disposition of France, according to circumstances, and the political relations with the United States."

has decreed and does decree that which follows:

Art. 1. In conformity to the orders which we have received from Paris, the 21st of December, 1809, we declare confiscated the American vessels whose names are subjoined; that is to say:

The Augustus, Hercules, Zephyr, Sophia, Romp, Two Betseys, Kite, Quakey and Betsey, Mary, capt. Derby, Syren, Emily, capt. Waterman, Francis, Hound, Peace, Victory, Dove, Urania, Fortune, William, Nancy, Maria, Hamilton, Phœnix, Ousitonick, Rose and Mary, Orozimbo, Amherst, Mary-Ann, Louisiana and the John.

Art. 2. Such of the cargoes of the said vessels as have not yet been sold, as well as the ships, are hereby directed to be disposed of at public sale, by the Minister Administrator-General of the indirect duties, and under the inspection of our Minister of Finances: or may be otherwise sold, at private sale, by the said Minister, as he shall judge most conducive to our interests.

Art. 3. The proceeds of these sales shall be deposited in a particular bank, to be hereafter employed as we shall judge convenient.

Art. 4. If any of the captors of the aforesaid vessels have claims upon them which they may think proper to advance they are authorised to present and explain their pretensions in relation to the same: and we shall decide thereupon, in pursuance of the report which we shall cause to be made to us by our Minister of the finances and the Minister of the marine and of war, after having taken the opinion of a commission composed of one of the administrator generals of indirect duties, of one member of the council of maritime prizes, and of one officer of the marine.

Our ministers of the finances, of war, and of the marine, are charged, as far as it concerns them respectively, with the execution of the present decree.

(Signed) JOACHIM NAPOLEON.

SIR, Paris, 16 April, 1810.

The John Adams being yet detained, I am able to inform you, that on the 11th instant the Emperor directed the sale of all the American vessels taken in the ports of Spain, and that the money arising therefrom, should be placed in his caissee privee. He has also refused to give up the Hero, and has ordered that the case be brought before the council of prizes where condemnation necessarily awaits it. I send a copy of a note upon which this last order was taken, and another relating to our business in Naples, and am, sir, with very high consideration,

Your most obedient

And very humble servant,

JOHN ARMSTRONG.

Hon. R. Smith, &c.

SIR, Paris, 20 March 1810.

The United States, wishing to fulfil their engagements to the holders of their public debt in Holland, but unable from the present state of commerce to do so by the ordinary mode of remitting bills of exchange, found it necessary to enter into contracts with certain merchants of the said States, to make remittance in tobacco. A cargo of this article was accordingly put on board of the American ship Hero, and despatched for the port of Tonningen in Denmark, with orders that the net proceeds should be placed in the hands of the American bankers in Amsterdam for the purpose above-mentioned. The passage having been uncommonly stormy, the ship much damaged, and the crew quite exhausted, the captain believed it to be his duty, on the principle of self preservation, to enter the first port he could make. He accordingly entered that of the Texel and, after having taken on board two pilots, and being within the fourth buoy was captured by a boat belonging to a French privateer. Besides the customary papers, all of which are in rule, the Hero sailed under a certificate, granted by the government, that the voyage was undertaken for the purpose of effecting a national remittance.

I have thought, sir, that the peculiarity of these circumstances made it proper for me to ask a special decision of his Majesty on this case, and with this view I have the honor of offering to your Excellency the present representation.

Accept, sir, &c.

(Signed) JOHN ARMSTRONG.

His Excellency The Duke of Cadore.

Paris, March 21, 1810.

SIR—I had yesterday the honor of stating to your Excellency the case of the American ship Hero, and requesting thereon his majesty's decision. I have now that of informing you that a number of American ships coming directly from the United States to the port of Naples, under a promise of protection from his majesty the king have notwithstanding been seized and their cargoes sold "for the benefit of the fisc." Nor does the injury stop here. Though thus deprived of all means of subsisting themselves, the captains have been obliged to subsist the crews (amounting to nearly 300 men) and are now menaced with a farther exaction for port charges.—This, in the strong language of one of the sufferers is literally to strip them naked, and then to demand from them the expence of doing so. As the Consular agent of the United States at Naples has made several unavailing representations on this subject to the king and as he has reason to believe that the system of which this treatment is a branch emanates from his Majesty the Emperor, it becomes my duty to submit the facts to your Excellency, and to seek, through your intervention, such correction of the evil as humanity and justice may conspire to dictate.—A remark which equally applies to the crews of the ships captured in Spain and Naples, is, that should the vessels to which they belong be confiscated, means ought to be afforded them of returning to their country. In this event, therefore, I have to propose to your Excellency that two or more ships be put at the disposition of the nearest American Consul, and permitted to sail for the United States under bond, for the amount of their valuations respectively.

I am sir, &c. (Signed)

JOHN ARMSTRONG.

H. E. the Duke of Cadore.

By the last Mails.

COLUMBIA.

WASHINGTON-CITY, JUNE 15.

THE public have now before them the despatches received by the John Adams. They add little to the information previously received; but they place that information in the most unquestionable shape, by giving it an official stamp.—Some hope might have been entertained, that our frigate would not have been suffered to depart with such unwelcome intelligence. But even that hope is now dissipated; and nothing remains but the manifestation of the naked purpose of the French government to pursue what it considers its line of interest, without regarding our interests or rights. It is possible, that previous to the departure of General Armstrong, some amicable propositions may be made; but they ought not to be expected, much less relied on.

National Intelligencer.

On the 31 February official notice was given to Mr. Bourne, the American Consul at Amsterdam, "that no American vessel whatever would be admitted into the ports of Holland.

NEW YORK.

NEW YORK, JUNE 18.

A letter from Naples of the 23d of March, to a gentleman of this city, (which letter we have seen,) says "All American property here has been confiscated, including the vessels, and will be sold at Public Auction in a few days."

Capt. Long, of the schooner Rosie, arrived at Baltimore in 42 days from Gluckstadt, informs that all American property in Holland, and all other places under the dominion of Bonaparte, is either already, or inevitably will be condemned. The ships and property in the Danish ports are liberated, but nothing can pass the lines in the interior: a great many American vessels sailed from Tonningen for St. Petersburg—such as have sailed with their cargoes paid no duties. The Danish privateers take every thing on suspicion, and they are certainly condemned if seen or known to have been in British convoy.

MASSACHUSETTS.

BOSTON, JUNE 21.

THE LATEST

Intelligence from Europe, is brought by the schooner Resolution, Bates, from Plymouth (England.) London accounts were received to the 15th of May. They are not interesting from important events; nor amusing from novel discussion.

John Philip Morier, Esq. is to be his Majesty's Secretary of Legation to this country: he probably will be received, and a gentleman sent to the Court of St. James's, with powers equally limited.

Sir Francis Burdett remained a prisoner in the Tower, where he was employed in answering addresses from the freeholders of Middlesex. He was waiting the decision of his case by law. Petitions had been presented to the House of Commons by the Livery of London, and the Borough of Reading for the liberation of Sir Francis and Mr. Gale Jones; the first was rejected by a majority of 92, the second being more temperate in its language, was suffered to lie on the table. It has been resolved after considerable discussion that the Speaker of the House, and the Sergeant at Arms, shall enter an appearance and a plea to the action of Sir Francis. Earl Moira has had a process served upon him as Lieutenant of the Tower, at the suit of Sir Francis Burdett.

The chief command of the French armies in Spain, is to be given (as before noticed) to Massena, (Prince of Esling); Ney (Duke of Elchingue) Junot, (Duke of Abrantes), and Regnier were to command under him. What have become of Victor and Soult? The report of the death of the former is probably true; we have not heard of either the recall or death of the Duke of Dalmatia.

Joseph Bonaparte is said to have joined the army before Cadiz on the 29th of April.

It is not true, as reported, that the French have evacuated Malaga: they were in possession on the 16th of April.

A rumour prevailed at Lisbon, about the 7th of May that Lord Wellington had advanced to the frontier of Portugal and intended to push on to Salamanca where the greater part of the French army, destined to attack that kingdom, was stationed. The Portuguese force consisted of about 40 000 men, well appointed, and principally commanded by English officers.

It is mentioned as a report in the Bayonne papers of the 2d April, that between 50 and 60 000 French troops were on their march to Spain.

The report that the Arch Duke Charles is to be made King of Spain, continues Joseph to be King of Italy. There seems to be an occasional exhibition of spirit on the part of the Spaniards, particularly in Catalonia, where General O'Donnald has met with success.—An advanced corps of his army commanded by the Marquis Campaverde after defeating a French division of 1300 men, has pursued them towards Barcelona and the communication between that city and the enemy is cut off in consequence.

Napoleon and his bride, who is made his Privy Counsellor, that she may not be absent from him during periods of public business, were journeying to different places for pleasure. They were at Dunkirk on the 10th of May, where great rejoicings in consequence had taken place.

Napoleon has published a Senatus Consultum of four articles. It provides that the territories lately taken from Holland, shall form an integral part of the French empire—which shall send five deputies to the Legislative body.

Robert Gordon, Esq. has been appointed Lieut. Governor of Bermudas, and Sir J. T. Duckworth, Governor and Commander in Chief of Newfoundland.

The Russian land forces are now in the whole composed of 671,286 men.

The Amsterdam Courier of the 4th states, that King Louis had left that capital in the morning, to meet Napoleon, who had arrived on the frontiers of Holland.

Napoleon has decorated the Archduke Charles with the Grand Ribbon of the Legion of Honour, and also with the Cross of the same Legion; "the former," says the Emperor, in a letter under his own hand, "as a tribute due to your genius as a General; the latter, to your bravery as a Soldier."

The most vigorous measures are about to be adopted by France, Prussia and Austria, to compel the Porte to accede to the continental system, or to make her pay dear for her condescension to the common enemy. The Porte on the contrary has decided in favour of England.

Earl Grey, in the House of Lords, May 7, gave notice, in an animated Speech, that on that day, three weeks, he intended to move a detailed address to his Majesty on the subject of the dignity and privileges of parliament.

KING OF ENGLAND.

A London article of May 8, observes:—"We are sorry to find, that his Majesty's total loss of sight will oblige him to undergo a painful operation, that of couching, which his physicians have recommended; every friend to his country will view with anxiety the result of an operation of such great importance."

FROM CADIZ.

Our English accounts bring news to the 1st of May. The small port of Matagorda, situated on the main land, which had been occupied by the English, was blown up and deserted on the 22d April, as was intended; after sustaining a heavy fire for two days from the enemies' batteries.—The English forces under the command of Lt. General Graham and Major General Stewart, amounted to about 10,000 men, the flower of the English army. The 44th, 87th, 88th, 79th, 94th, and 95th regiments are there, a fine Portuguese regiment, officered by the English, together with several detachments of English foot guards and one of artillery:—these, with 20,000 Spaniards, 10,000 volunteers, and 15 English ships of the line, will render the place nearly impregnable:—though the enemies advanced parties are close to the walls of the dock yard, and one battery of 40 pieces of cannon bears upon the city. In some of the batteries they have furnaces for heating shot, which oblige the English ships to keep at some distance.

Sheriff.
Marshals of the Day.

The procession to form on Washington-Square, and at half past 9 o'clock, A. M. move up the south side of the Square, down Spring-Street, through Franklin-Street, and up Thames-Street, to the Second Baptist Meeting House. After the Oration, the procession will again form in Farewell-Street, proceed down Poplar-Street, through Washington-Street, up the Long-Wharf, to Washington-Square.

WILLIAM DENNIS, Esq. Col. JAMES PERRY, and Major HORATIO S. DEXTER, Marshals of the Day.

SIMEON MARTIN, CHRISTOPHER FOWLER, CHRISTOPHER G. CHAMPLIN, DANIEL SHELDON, JAMES PERRY, BENJAMIN FRY, THOMAS D. STALL, WILLIAM DENNIS, and HORATIO S. DEXTER, the Town's Committee of Arrangements.

THE DESPATCHES

By the John Adams Frigate, have been communicated to the public with an alacrity hitherto unpractised by our democratic administration.—We presume this has been produced by a sense of the importance and decisive aspect of those documents. However pertinaciously (and for our country ruinously) the late and present administrations may have clung to France, they will now be compelled to abandon all their partialities and prejudices. They are absolutely coerced into the conviction, that we can expect neither justice nor mercy from the hand of Bonaparte.

For this melancholy truth, the merchants of the United States will have to pay upwards of twenty five millions of dollars—the sum at present under the controul of Bonaparte—a farthing of which it would be madness to expect will ever return to its rightful owners. Such being the forlorn situation of our affairs with France, and those with Great Britain being completely disjointed, a very serious and difficult duty devolves upon our government. On this account we are inclined to believe there is truth in the report, that Congress will be convened in the course of the summer.

Many circumstances had conspired to excite a suspicion that our minister in France was either afraid or unwilling to urge on that government the enormity and injustice of its conduct towards this country. We are happy to find, by the letters now communicated to the public, that Gen. Armstrong has addressed the French government in a language worthy the representative of a country professing to be free and independent.—His note of the 10th of March, is as energetic as it is just, and reflects as much honor on his spirit as his understanding. But alas, these representations, urged with so much truth and firmness, are totally unavailing against the lust of power and avarice!

Extract of a letter to the Editors from a Gentleman at Washington, dated June 15.

"Observing it to be stated in various public prints, that there is a probability, or intention of calling Congress, I can assure you that no such intention exists: that on the contrary there is almost a certainty, should nothing further occur, that Congress will not convene before the constitutional period.

"The two Spanish gentlemen, Don Juan V. Volibar and Don Joseph Yvern, said to be charged with communications from Caracca to this government, left the city this morning for Philadelphia, where they will reside for the present. They were treated with the greatest [illegible] but could not be received in any official character being charged with no documents exhibiting them as representatives of a government or nation. They were, however, assured of the most friendly wishes towards them.

Poetry.

From the MONTHLY ANTHOLOGY.

ON SPRING.

SWEET Spring returning twines the annual wreath,
Breathes the soft zephyr and unfolds the flower,
And nature wakes again
The choral voice of joy.

The meadow smiles in renovated green;
The blooming orchard sheds its rich perfume,
And bursting buds renew
The honours of the grove.

The garden now, where art and nature join
Simplicity, and elegance, and taste,
The province of the fair,
Invites the culturing hand.

But most Spring charms where nature reigns alone
In woody wilds, or on the mountain's side,
Where crimson columbines
And purple violets blow.

Now sinks the sun beyond the western hills;
His setting glory tinging all the clouds
With rich and varying hues,
That mock the pencil's power.

Sweet are the charms of Spring, but doubly sweet
When lingering twilight steals upon the day;
When the mild star of eve
Glows in the blue serene.

While falling dews refresh each drooping flower,
And fragrance mingles with the gentle breeze,
Calm Meditation hails
Her full and chosen hour.

She views in blooming nature, nature's God,
And while his bounties meet each rapture'd sense,
She joins her voice in praise
With angels round his throne.

Daniel W. Barker,

Respectfully informs his Friends and the public in general.

THAT he has for Sale Cordage of all dimensions.—Bolt-rope and Cables made at short notice. His stock is St. Petersburgh's clean Hemp, and he does not make in his rope-walk any kind of white work which takes every pound of fine hemp, and leaves the coarse hemp or cordage. Any Merchant who turns into his rope walk hemp, may rely upon having the whole of it manufactured agreeably to his directions, as he never selects the fine hemp in order to load his shelves with every kind of white work. Those Merchants who may please to give him their custom, their favours will be gratefully acknowledged.
